Course Description:
52.1801 Sales, Distribution and Marketing Operations, General
Multimedia Marketing Design provides instruction in the fields of marketing, sales, merchandising, distribution, management and entrepreneurship. The program is designed around six related components: Sales Management, Small Business Entrepreneurship, Multimedia/Web Design, Sports/Entertainment & Recreation Marketing, Principles of Leadership and International/Cyber Marketing. The classes prepare students for selling, buying, pricing, advertising and owning their own businesses. In addition, the class covers technical knowledge of products and services marketed, related communication, math skills and attitudes associated with human relations. Professionalism is developed through Distributive Education Club of America (DECA) national organization and related activities. Students will be prepared for entry-level positions in retailing, wholesale trade, banking, entertainment, travel, hospitality, food service, communications and operating their own businesses. The program provides an excellent business foundation for a post-secondary degree in marketing, advertising, business management, merchandising, sports and entertainment marketing and other related fields.
